Where is My Boy Tonight?

In this immediate locality it behooves the mothers to answer that question every night about seven o'clock. If they can answer it by seeing their boy right in their presence in the house at that hour and see him reading or studying or in some proper way amusing himself from that time until he goes to bed all right. If they cannot do that the chances are against the answer being all right.

We have no hesitation in saying that what the boy does after seven o'clock in the evening in this village is going to have much to do with the amount of trouble, sorrow, expense and disaster that will come to the mother in the day time.

That there are far too many boys in this village out of their homes at night until late, goes with out fear of contradiction. There is no law to compel a boy to be in the house in the evening unless the law of the mother and in a few instances the law of the father. The natural inclination of boys is to be out on the street "having a good time." That "having a good time" very often involves themselves and mothers in a burden of sorrow, woe, and disgrace that is unspeakable.

Lounging around stores, hotels, billiard rooms, and street corners evenings, have brought in the past, laziness, profanity, vulgarity, drunkenness and crime immeasurable and will continue to do so. It is true that in the vast majority of cases storekeepers, hotelkeepers and others who boys would not lounge around their places. But look at it as we will, do the best we can, the mother is the one who has to rule the boy for good. No outside influence can do the job. "As the twig is bent the tree is inclined." And the mother must bend the twig. It may be the father assists, but more likely not. He is too busy. In this hamlet of ours if the mothers do not bend the twigs, they will become bent by other influences that are bad and pernicious in most cases, and the mothers who neglected to do the bending will reap a harvest of sorrow.

This is not tommy rot or goody goody talk. It is a hard matter of fact proposition that many parents have found to be true and many more are in the way, right here, to find it so sooner than they expect. Again we ask, "where is my boy tonight?"

Grinnell Bros' Word Contest.

The $450.00 Grinnell Bros' piano was won by Miss Alice E. Bradford, 912, 13th St., Bay City.

The $65.00 Silver Chimes organ was won by Miss N. McLarty of Saginaw, P. O.

The contest was decided in strict accordance with the published rules, and every list was carefully examined so that all contestants were treated in an absolutely fair and impartial manner.

After we had decided the contest a committee of two well known residents of Bay City was appointed to investigate the method employed in awarding the prizes. These gentlemen reported as follows:

"We the undersigned, after examination of the lists and method employed to determine the winners in the Grinnell Bros' 'Word Contest' are fully satisfied that the prizes have been properly awarded."

Grange Notes.

There will be a social at the residence of Homer Benedict, of Beaver Creek, May 17th, everybody invited. Ladies bring your lunch boxes, we'll do the rest.

The Grange will hold their memorial Saturday, June 16th, particulars later.

Since my last, two prominent Grangers have passed to their reward, Bro. E. A. Strong, of Vicksburg, Treasurer of the Michigan state Grange, he was serving his 22d consecutive year. His accounts were always correct and in order for examination, and the funds safely secured and ready for needed payments.

Also Bro. H. D. Platt, of Ypsilanti, while Bro. Platt was a member of the Executive Committee of the State Grange, a gang of swindlers were holding up farmers demanding royalties on the sliding farm gate and driveways.

Brother Platt put up a vigorous fight against them and by the aid of the State Grange routed the whole nest, and established a precedent, which has saved to the people thousands of dollars. He was appointed by Governor Lucre State oil inspector and was the first to make that office a source of revenue to the state. We feel proud to record the deeds of such members of our order, and point to them as Ideal Fathers of Husbandry. Com.

One Way.

The Philadelphia ringster was in a distant town hiding from his home people.

In his dismal little hotel room he turned on the lights and dozed, preparatory for bed.

Yet something told him that sleep would not visit his eyelids that night. So he paced the floor and wrung his hands in all the despair of the hunted.

And as he walked he muttered aloud, "Oh, how can I put an end to this disgraceful exposure?"

Just then a shrill voice from across the narrow alley called out indignantly, "Well, pulling down the blinds would help some!"

SOME PEOPLE.

L. White Busby, secretary to Speaker Cannon, is said to be one of the best dressed men at the national capital.

Andrew Carnegie, observing his sixty-eighth birthday, announces that he has succeeded in giving away $138,000,000.

Justice Pollard of St. Louis, for several years past, whenever a man is brought before him for drunkenness, requires his signature to a total abstinence pledge for a year or more and stays sentence as long as the pledge is kept.

Gen. A. B. Aylesworth, Ontario's new Postmaster General, who is seeking election to Parliament to succeed Sir William Murdoch, is described as closely resembling Abraham Lincoln in appearance, being 6 feet 6 inches in height.

A cook has been going around a station in the South of India with the following "character," and is somewhat surprised he is not engaged: "Abdul has been my cook for three months. It seems much longer. He leaves on account of ill health—my ill health."

Congressman Chandler of Mississippi, just as soon as he took his oath of office, stepped over to the box at the right of the Speaker's desk and dropped in a bill providing for the erection of a public building at Tupelo. This is the third time he has done this. "Private" John Allen started it twenty years ago.

JOSH BILLINGS' PHILOSOPHY.

Here is the grate difference between a fool and a wise man—the fool is known most by others, the wise man by himself.

Hunting for happiness is like hunting for hens' eggs under the barn; half the time they are added after you have found them.

There is only one kind of person who is fit to live in solitude, and it is the one who is capable of adorning every position in society.

If I was going into the hermit business, I would go into the heart of a grate city, rather than into the heart of a mountain. A grate city is a grate solitude.

The man who robs the widder and the orphan or their patrimony is simply a villain; but he who undertakes to disturb the religious faith or others is a fiend.

It is the surprise or life that add most to our pleasures. One man is surprised with a legacy from a rich uncle, another that the old speckled hen has just run off from her nest with 22 chickens.

When the watchful husband intercepts the tired wife who has started after coal, considerably takes the bucket and brings the coal himself, he furnishes the children an object lesson of affectionate regard that must make a lasting impression.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold a business meeting in the church parlors, Friday, May 11, at 2:30 o'clock. All members requested to be present. The supper announced last week to be given the 11th, is postponed until next week Friday, May 18.

County conventions for the selection of delegates to represent the several counties in state convention will be held as usual this year, on dates named by the state committee. But delegates to these county conventions will not be selected as heretofore, at party caucuses, but through primary elections held in the various delegate precincts, wards and townships.

Revival meetings have been held for three weeks in the Baptist church at Gaylord, conducted by Evangelist Strickland of Niles. The meetings closed last Sunday night. The total number of professed conversions was 118, of which many were adults. The Herald says: "The success of the meetings cannot be described by the number of decisions, for a decided uplift has been given to the moral standard in the community."

Friday evening the opera house was filled with people awaiting the time when the Minstrel would begin. When the curtain arose the full orchestra and the full Minstrel troupe were on the stage. There were six and men who did their parts well and the jokes were very original. After the Minstrel was over there was over, there was a scene in a country hotel on circus day that was very amusing and all enjoyed the show from beginning to end. After it was over there was a dance which also was an enjoyable feature.

Susan B. Anthony.

No minilateral angel, she, To bind up wounds and cool the fevered brow.

With the soft hands of pity, She was of the sterner stuff

Whereof God makes His heroes, Stalwart, stark—yet pitiful withal,

With tearless tenderness that found expression

In deeds of battle for the cause of right.

Hers was the warrior soul, Locked in a woman's breast,

Predetermined to do battle, Nobly she strove, yet sacrificed no whit.

Of that true womanhood That was her ideal.

A Lady Valiant, she—Semiramis of suffrage, who enlarged The boundaries that spacially inclose Her vast empire.

Great were her labors, great her victories.

As liberty attests. The days are hers. Yet this, her greater glory—

That, though opposing, and opposed thereby

To state conventions by the world esteemed,

She overthrew them; yet at last still held

She overthrew them; yet at last still held

The love of women and respect of men.

—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

The entertainment given, Monday evening, by Miss Grace Babel, of Onaway, and Mrs. Bauman, of Gaylord, was indeed a success and although there was a small house, all that were there seemed highly pleased.

Babel is fine in the line of elocution and we hope we may have the pleasure of hearing her again in the near future.

Mrs. Bauman sang several very fine selections and we hope also, that this may not be her last appearance in Grayling. Van Dorn assisted in the programme by singing one of the popular songs, accompanied by Arthur Fournier.

When a member of the family has occasion to correct a statement made by another, he can not be too careful, too considerate. To contradict is a dangerous thing, unless it be done in a most gracious and respectful manner.

Father and mother must set the example. They must show their little tots how diplomatically, how carefully it can be done. If the mother says, "I beg pardon, my dear, you are mistaken," in a gentle tone of voice and otherwise backed up by a most respectful regard, the children catch the spirit and their contradictions are ever so nicely and smoothly made.

TABLET CHEER.

What an opportunity for all-around good cheer does the meal hour afford at morning, noon and night. These are the times when the family chain is complete. Father, mother and the children are brought face to face, all at one time. They must talk and exchange glances at short range.

The drawing, binding, uplifting, sanctifying sense of family relationship is felt to its full. These are three times a day reunions that ought to be so full of enjoyment as that they will be looked forward to with the most pleasurable anticipation.

Rightly ordered, father and mother have opportunity at the table to make the most lasting impressions for good.

Not alone is it the only means of fixing correct table manners, but it is an occasion which ought to be used for character building. Father and mother set first an example of devotional regard, and ingeniously, but unconsciously to their offspring, do they inculcate principles of moral ethics which become the warp and woof of life-long character.

Everything unpleasant should be banished from the table. It should be a festal board in the best sense of the term. If there have been infractions of the ethical code, they should be considered at another time and place. The mind of no child should be haunted by the thought that he may be called to account at the table for misconduct. At the table all should be serene. Good nature and good cheer should reign supreme.

In time, the family chain about the festal board will be broken. Some precious link will be snapped by death. Another will be mated with a congenial spirit and go forth to fulfill the natural mission of life. One by one will the dear children depart until some day father and mother will find themselves alone, just as they were many years before. Then may come family reunions, more difficult and less frequent as the years go by, until some day one of the two links will be sundered. From that day on the hallowed family chain will exist only as a blessed memory.

Yes, the table is one of the best places on earth for good cheer. However poor or however grand, the table should be sanctified by an uninterrupted expression of good nature. The children look to father and mother for example. Their keen eyes detect the smallest demonstration of ruffled feelings. Equally quick do their searching optics discern every manifestation of good humor and their sensitive spirits go down or up as they discover bad or good feelings.

For the children's sake, for our own sake, for the world's sake, let hearty good cheer at all times have full way at the family table.

FLYING FISH ARE SIMILAR TO WINGS.

Flying Fish Really Propel Themselves Through the Air.

Does the flying fish really fly, or is the so-called flight a mere extended leap, in which the fins are used on the principle of the aeroplane to float or rest on the air, and so afford support to the body? The question has been much discussed, and many naturalists have denied it the power of true flight. Mr. Frank Bullen, who in his many voyages has had unique opportunities for observing the flying fish, is emphatic in the assertion that it does really fly in the proper sense of the word. He has seen it, for example, change its course at a sharp angle when an obstacle intervened, and when about to re-enter the water he has seen it rise and continue its course on seeing no enemy below. Some recent observations contributed by Lieut. Col. Durnford to the London Annals and Magazine of Natural History, confirm this view. The writer contends that the ordinary aeroplane theory involves a mechanical impossibility. The true explanation is an intensely rapid vibration of the winglike fins—a vibration which becomes apparent to the eye as it slows down when the fish reaches the water.—London Globe.

PASSIONS OF LOWER ANIMALS.

Are Influenced by Jealousy and Crime, as in Humanity.

More curious it is to note that among animals as among men, some of the worst offenses that can be committed have their origin in the passion of love. Jealousy burns fiercely in many a brute's bosom, and when affected with the "universal distemper of love," the whole animal creation, from the tiger to the dove, is capable of any excesses against its kind, whether of its own or the human kind. Association for deliberate purposes of wrongdoing is not rare among animals, both of the higher and the lower order of intelligence. Other animals seek in hands. Baboons go out in troops to rob orchards difficult of access. Conditions of climate and change of atmosphere have their influence upon the temperaments of animals. Speaking generally, wild creatures inhabiting very hot countries are more savage than those inhabiting cold or temperate climes.

Effect of Condiments on Food.

The Russian physiologist Pavlov, has clearly demonstrated in his researches on digestion, that the digestion of substances with a purely nutritive value does not sufficiently satisfy the demands of the body—taste and appetite must also be taken into consideration. These are satisfied only by the addition to the food of spices and salt, and it is largely due to the influence of these condiments that the proper amount of gastric juice is liberated by the mucous membrane of the stomach. The action upon the stomach of certain spices, when followed by the favorable effect on the flow of the gastric secretion may be mental impressions induced by the mere sight and odor of a well-prepared dish.—Medical Record.

More Information Required.

An addition has been made to the list of fresh vegetation, a scientist declaring that he recently discovered in the wilds of Australia a genuine singing tree. We have heard of the upas tree, with its deadly odor; the man-eating tree, whose limbs stretched forth to grasp and draw into a fatal embrace the unwary victim; and the baobab tree, which when blossomed from the restraint of all the tanned roots in air and soared away above the trackless wilds. But the singing tree is something new. Unfortunately, the scientist fails to give us the range of its voice or the style of music it prefers.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Splendid Magnanimity.

A poor but worthy old couple had a rare stroke of luck. Some relative died and left them a fortune of $20. The night of the arrival of the lawyer's letter telling them of their good fortune, they sat up late, discussing the future and what they would do with the great sum they had inherited.

When They Had Done and Were Rising to go to bed, the old man said, with a grand air of magnanimity, "Well, I suppose, Janet, this'll make the difference. We'll just speak to the neighbors as before."—Weekly Scotman.

Well-Known Tune Very Ancient.

Few who have heard the ditty are probably aware of the history and antiquity of "For he's a jolly good fellow," sung at countless banquets and social functions. Mr. Benjamin Sulte, a Canadian poet and historian, has been lecturing in Toronto on the old folksongs of the Dominion, and he incidentally mentioned that the air of "For he's a jolly good fellow" came into France from Spain, but Spain got it from the Moors, who had stolen it from the Persians thousands of years ago.

Sleep With Your Windows Open.

Every window in the bedroom, says Mr. Somerset Hastings, should be opened top and bottom to its fullest extent just before retiring, no matter what was the state of the weather so that a refreshing current might play over the sleeper's couch. If this plan were generally adopted, coughs, colds, sore throats, and consumption would be more rare than at present, and a harder condition would be the direct consequence.

Best Lens of All.

The isometrop lens, made by a French scientist from a combination of substances, is said to have enormous advantages over the ordinary lens used for spectacles. It has none of the greenish tint of the common lens, it can be made thinner, it has a larger focus, and it keeps out the blinding rays of the sun. It is, therefore, of greater utility for those suffering from defective sight than anything yet devised.

Macaroni Made in America.

American macaroni most often imitates the form of the Genovese. An expert in macaroni says that the best in this country is made in Texas from Nebraska winter wheat. There the acres and perhaps hundreds of small macaroni factories in the Italian quarters of American cities, and there are located a few large factories where macaroni is made commercially on a large scale.

Austrian Government Fines.

The Austrian government is so intolerant of mistakes that it cancels documents, not only on the ground of serious mistakes or misspellings, but even as the result of a misshapen letter. The use of "small," instead of capital, "B" in the word "Briefe" led a short time ago to the destruction of 25,000 forms issued to the various post offices.

Glass Eyes an Old Invention.

Glass eyes were invented about the year 1570, and were crude productions of inferior workmanship, the iris and pupil being hand painted in a far from lifelike manner. Shakespeare mentions glass eyes in "King Lear," where the King advises the blinded traitor Gloucester to "Get thee glass eyes, and seem to see."

Falseness Easier Than Truth.

Falseness is so easy, truth so difficult. The pencil is conscious of a deplorable facility in drawing a circle, the larger the circle and the larger the wings the better; but that marvelous facility which we mistake for genius is not to be taken as when we want to draw a real unexaggerated lion.—George Elliot.

Native Police and Soldiers.

There are no white soldiers or police in British New Guinea, where the natives number 300,000. The government consists of a British administrator, an executive council and a magistracy, all of whom are natives. There are 500 non-official white residents.

European Ju-Jitsu.

A French teacher of boxing points out that an art of self-defense approximately equivalent to Ju-Jitsu was known in Europe in the seventeenth century. Its principles are explained in a work by one Nicolas Peters, published at Amsterdam in 1674.

Sir Walter Scott's Literary Glimpse.

Sir Walter Scott had a habit of equipping his chapters with quotations from the fabliaux. On one occasion Scott happened to ask John Ballantyne, who was sitting with him, to hunt up a particular passage in Beaumont and Fletcher. Scott's patience became exhausted and he exclaimed, "Hang it all. I can make a motto sooner than you can find one." And he did, and the habit grew.—London Chronicle.

Snakes and Their Food.

Most particular as to their food, snakes eat only that which they kill, and they judge of the fitness of their food by its motion, taking nothing which does not move swiftly. Field mice and birds are dainties they especially covet, and in hunting and capturing them they display the guile and cunning which the scriptures attribute to them.

Goldsmith's Work in History.

Looking back into history since its origin and by inspecting our museums, it is seen that everywhere and at all times goldsmiths' work has been the incarnation of the ideal of nations, the reflection of their transformations and the mirror of their dominant ideas and fluctuations in taste, the echo of their greatness and of their decadence.

Productivity of Flies.

If all of the larvae of the common fly came to maturity and nothing happened to cut down the maximum natural rate of increase, one pair of flies might multiply to 100,000,000, according to eminent scientific authorities, in a single half year of warm weather.

Bad Language.

There are several different kinds of bad language. That used by chefs and matrons d'hotel on their menus is one of the worst. They are incorrigibly ignorant—and glory in it. The average menu contains usually at least a brace of orthographic howlers.—Vanity Fair.
